Other:

Ian Sharrock is a lifelong Alaska resident, born at Providence Hospital in 1971. His family came to Anchorage in the 1920's and he plans to always call Alaska home. Ian has lived in this precinct since 1999, where he and his wife Carla Hollingsworth are raising their son Caleb.

Ian attended local Catholic and public schools, plus several years at the University of Alaska. Ian has worked primarily in residential construction, first framing homes, and for the last fifteen years making homes more energy efficient in many Alaskan communities. His joys are family, time at the lake, hiking, skiing, and photography in the Chugach and Talkeetna mountains, and studying Alaska's history, economy and energy industry.

Statement:

At age eighteen, I registered as an independent. Currently, 51% of District 16 voters are also independent. That's more than twice any single party, who identify as impartial voters committed to choose ANY candidate that best represents how government should serve. Like many of this large majority, I've thought for years my ballot options were too limited, and now would like to fill that void.

Rather than campaign 'against' a Republican or Democrat, I am running as a choice, and a voice for voters who want to see policy-making without the polarization that has become too common in public discourse. I will represent my district as an independent by working with all stakeholders to honor common principles and develop policy solutions that will withstand the pendulum swing from one election to the next.

Put simply, my goal is to be a Statesman. As such I will be civil, and strong. I will ask tough questions, remain impartial, and offer outside-the-box ideas. My values are based in the principles of liberty and the rule of law, human potential, and responsibility.

My vision for the state includes both a reduction in the cost and growth of government, as well as current residents and businesses helping to pay for state operations. That vision also includes more cooperation between development and conservation interests, as well as states' rights strongly balancing federal actions.

If you are interested in financially and politically sustainable solutions, please help elect this Non-Affiliated candidate.

Many thanks,
Ian Sharrock
